

Back in April of this year the professional technical societies American Society for Quality (ASQ), Association for Manufacturing Excellence (AME) and IIE Twin Cities, and AME hosted a joint dinner meeting at the Ramada Plaza in Minneapolis. This was an excellent opportunity to network with professionals working in other industries while hearing two presentations from renowned speakers.

After dinner and networking Corin Hammitt and Didier Rabino presented an overview of their “Fast Track to a Lean Transformation” at HealthEast. It was fascinating to hear some of the challenges and successes of their six month intensive transformation.

Next, Brad Slaker discussed his non-profit company, DesignWise Medical, of which he is founder and CEO. Brad talked about the model for his business which develops medical products for the unmet needs of children. It was captivating to hear how this business model works - delivering highly technical devices to a narrow market, for no profit.

Overall this was an excellent joint technical society event and we can't wait to see the agenda for next year!
